

Destroying the beauty of the community?

Not exactly.

In fact, the vast majority of reclamation projects, coal companies not only can return the land to its original shape, but also improve the area by leaving much needed level land. Like this new neighborhood built in Hazard. Creating useable land gives communities the opportunity for economic and community development, benefiting people throughout the region.

Never underestimate the power of coal.™